

Farmer's Best Friend

Ladybugs are not only regarded as lucky charms, but also as a farmer's best friend. This is because they consume pests that eat plants and destroy crops. Even ladybug larvae enjoy devouring bugs; they start doing it as soon as they emerge from their eggs! In their natural environments, ladybugs have a lifespan of 2 - 3 years. They weigh less than a paper clip and are just around 1t of an inch long. The majority of ladybugs are red, although they can also be entirely black, yellow, orange, or orange-brown. Ladybugs are a lucky charm, but they're a very important insect.

Answer the following questions.

Q1. Why are ladybugs called farmers' best friends?

A: _____

Q2. What's the lifespan of ladybugs in their natural habitat?

A: _____

Q3. How much do ladybugs weigh?

A: _____

Q4. How long are ladybugs?

A: _____

Q5. What colors other than red can ladybugs be found?

A: _____